The Sino-Japanese Studies Group will meet in conjunction with the AAS meetings in Washington this coming March (1995). After several announcements concerning SJS, we plan to have a discussion that picks up on some of the themes dealt with this past March. At that time we discussed Douglas Reynolds's book, China, 1898-1912: The Xinzheng Revolution and Japan. In Washington we will continue the discussion on the basis of the research many of us have done and are doing on the late-Qing and early-Republican periods in Sino-Japanese relations.
