Meeting of Sino-Japanese Studies Group. As we have in recent years, the Sino-Japanese Studies Group will meet in conjunction with the upcoming AAS convention in Boston, March 1999. This year we do not have a particular book to discuss as we have done in past years, but we do have business to address and perhaps new or prospective members to greet. Active members as well as new and interested persons are invited to attend. See the AAS program for the time and place of our meeting.

International Conference on Liang Qichao and Japan. This past September, the Interdisciplinary Humanities Center of the University of California, Santa Barbara played host to an international symposium entitled: "The Role of Japan in the Reception of Modern Western Civilization in China: The Case of Liang Qichao." Participants came from six countries (United States, People's Republic of China, Republic of China, Japan, Australia, and France) to assess the impact that Japan and the Japanese played in the life and works of Liang. The conference drew on the earlier research group convened at the Institute for Research in the Humanities at Kyoto University from 1993-97 by Professor Hazama Naoki 狭間直樹. The conference schedule follows. Inasmuch as plans for an edited volume are underway, the papers are not now available (except, perhaps, from the individual authors, with all the usual caveats).

It is rare that an international conference can focus so sharply on an issue at once so precise and so immense. The conference was planned to be held in English and Chinese, but it soon turned almost entirely in Chinese.
